THE action of the unofficial-members in opposing the Chinese Extradition Bill in the Legislative Council, after the announcement that the clause admitting evidence taken in Chinese courts was to be struck out, cannot be considered very wise. To that clause there were undoubted and weighty their depredations in China. objections, and to have rejected the Bill on its account, had it been intended that the clause should remain part of the measure, would have been a perfectly justifiable and understandable course. costly and cumbrous that the Chinese Authorities have given up applying for fugitive criminals. The object of section 16 was to facilitate the giving up of such persons by providing that depositions taken in China should be received in evidence in the courts N effervesoing preparation, forming when of this colony. The matter has not, however, reached the stage of finality, we believe. The Governor spoke of clause 16 of the Bill as an alternative which he did not prefer himself but which had been approved by the Secretary of State. That alternative not having been carried into effect, the Governor will probably again urge the other, to which which he has not publicly disclosed. It is and T. H. Talbot (Secretary). impossible that things can go on as they are. The Hon. P. RYRIE says, "give up rendi- May :tion altogether," and that is practically what has been done, for the cost and difficulty render it probibitive. But, having agreed by treaty to give up to China her fugitive criminals, common honesty demands that we should carry out our obligations, and self-interest points in the same direction, for not only do we not want the colony to bedition, this preparation will be found most come the resort of the rascaldom of Kwangobligations to China how can we complain if Thing does not carry out her obligations? Of course little real value could be attached.

to evidence purporting to be taken in Chinese courts, but with the safeguards provided by the Extradition Bill against any respectable resident being given up clause 16 seemed not wholly undeserving of consideration. The chance of the class of men to whom the Hon. J. J. KESWICK referred. men against whom there is some political charge or men who are wanted because thay have come from Penang or Chinese authorities could not levy charges upon them," being given up, was, under the provisions of the Bill, rendered exceedingly remote, and the Chinese Authorities, if they had tried to use the law against this class would soon have discovered the futility of the attempt. The surrender of criminals who had fled direct to the colony would have been rendered casy, but reputable residents were well protected. The clause has, however, been abandoned, and we cannot profess to regret it, for it does not strike us as by any means the best possible solution of the difficulty. The subject is important enough to warrant the negotiation of a special extradition treaty with China, if the object cannot be attained otherwise. Such a treaty might import into the exist ing agreement such limitations as those which the Governor on Monday said could not be included in the Ordinance for the reason that they were limitations of a treaty As to the policy of readily giving up real criminals who may flee to this colony there can be no two opinions. It is true the barbarous nature of the Chinese criminal code and procedure makes the duty of giving up any man, however abandoned he may be, an lat the end of June. exceedingly unpleasant one, but as the Hon. The Invalide Russe states that among the conscripts drawn in the year 1888 for service in the celebrated Preobrajonsky regiment was a young soldier whose height was 7ft. He was a native of the province of Radom, in Poland Since the famous drum-major of Peter the Great the Preebrajonsky regiment, although notorious for tall men, has not possessed a soldier as tall as this young giant. When eight Quaker ladies had an appointment, and seven were punctual, and the eighth. being a quarter of an hour too late, began apologising for keeping the others waiting, the reply from one of them was: "I am sorry, friend, that thee should have wasted thing own quarter of an hour, but thee had no right to waste one bour and three-quarters more of our time, which was not thine own." Of Washington it is said that when his secretary, on some important occasion, was late, and excused himself by saying his watch was too slow, the reply wea, "You will have to get another watch or I | BUATION. another secretary." Napoleon used to say to his marshals, "You may ask anything of me A report comes from Paris, admittedly a central authority on the merits of jewellery, to the effect that a wily syndicate of Persian merchants have distributed at the Nijni Novgorod fairs a Manile stock of 100,000 imitation turquoises. The blue stones are in preat request among Russian ladies. particularly when set after the Persian manner in steel or silver. It is not likely that in modern times the turquoise will ever be valued as it undoubtedly was in olden days. Now it depends chiefly on its exquisite colour, whereas then it was held in high estimation for its efficacy as a talisman. As a kind of barometer by which constancy or its absence could be registered, the blue stone has enjoyed centuries of reputation, and even now in Germany it is the recognised gage d'amour. As it is peculiarly liable to change colour it seldom fails to keep up its hisoric character. The London correspondent of the Manchester luardian writes:—The statement that mr Bright was not an admirer, and reader of Shakspeare is as untrue of his later as it is of his earlier days. Last autumn an old friend of Mr. Bright's called to see him at One Ash. The right hon, gentleman was found in his study. reclining on the sofa, with a book in his hand. "You see what I am reading." he said to his. visitor; "it is Shakespeare. He is a favourite | day offictor author of mine, and I could not tell you how many times I have read him. Upstairs I have an old edition of his works." Nor is it true to say that Mr. Bright rarely quoted Shakspeare either in his private conversation or his public speeche. Glancing through the published speeches and addresses of the right hon, gentleman, I find that they contain quotations from "Hamlet," "Henry IV.," and "King Lear." It is also worthy of notice that Mr. Bright's favourite motto, "Be just and fear not," is borrowed from Shakspeare. Uncle Jeromiah had not invited him to remain, but Philip thought it likely that he might all part of the business—it goes with widows' departing nurses, one after another, like the pro-caps. When I lost Sidebottom I was worn to a cossion of kings revealed to Macbeth in Hecate's he most painful to him to continue at the factory, shadow and cot a court, her hand to be a court, and the court of the court, her hand to be a court, subordinate position. Should be return to the from the billiard table, to communicate to him my cough with my weeds. When you appear on as was the ancestral Stanley found in eagle's solicitor's firm at Nottingham, in which he had nest on the top of a pine, of which the family been before? That his services there were valued he was well aware, that his resignation of "Of course it will be dull and hateful, but Uncle Jeremiah was restored to strength, a clerkship therein had caused annoyance he what will you have? I sacrifice myself for you, moral as well as physical. He no longer thought was well aware; he knew, however, that turned to the office, he would be obliged to take a lower desk. He might, and probably would be advanced, but that would require patlence, and he must wait till a vacancy occurred. Bosidos, it would be a humiliation to have to solicit readmission, after he had left the office on stilts, as one who had come into a fortune. Then—what was to be done about his wifelf He could not maintain her child on a junior clerk's wage. Moreover, he had sent her away when he occupied a lofty moral platform, because connection with her sullied the fair name of Pennycomequick, and might injure the firm; and now that he no longer belonged to the firm, but was a poor clerk of no consequence in the world. was he to write to her a letter of humble apoagainst ländladies? He had little doubt that nole Jeremiah would propose to make Salome an allowance, and that on this allowance together with his salary they might be able to rub along. But to accept such relief from Uncle Jeremiah, granted through his wife - his wife whom he had snubbed and thrust away—was not > pleasant to contemplate. 🐣 Whatever way Philip considered the meal set before him, he saw only humble pie, and humble pie is the least appetising of dishes. Philip approached it as a sniky child does a morsel which his nurse requires him to eat, without consuming which he must expect no pudding. He walked round it, he looked at it from near, then he drew back and considered it at long range, then he touched it, then smelt it, then turned his back on it, then—with a grumble—began to pick a few crumbs off it and put them between his lips. He went to bed at last, unresolved, angry with himself, angry with Salome, angry with his uncle, and angry with the baby who was sobbing in the nursery. Philip's experiences had all been made in spiral form, they were ever turning about himself, and though each revolution attained a higher level, it was still made about the same centre. There is a family likeness in minds as well as in noses and eyes and hair; and in this Philip resembled | su his annt, but with the difference that he was that nothing would induce him to deviate from what he believed to be just, whereas his aunt's principles were flexible, and governed only by her own interests.

In these days in which we live, socialism is in the air, that is to say, it is talked of and professed, but whether by any is practised I am inclined to question. For socialism I take to mean everyo e for everyone else, and no one for When he arrived at Mergatroyd, he had not himself, and this is a condition contrary to the nature of man, for men are all more or less waterspouts, vortices, attracting to themselves whatever comes within their reach, and to be actuated by a centrifugal, not a centripetal force is the negative of individuality.

We stalk our way over the ocean, drawing up 1 through our skirts every drop of water, every seaweed, and crab and fish and molluse that we can touch, and whirl them round and round ourselves, and only cast them away and distribute them to others when they are of no more use to ourselves. Every climatic zone through which Philip had essed had served to feed and build up the column of his self-esteem; the rugged weather in furnished lodgings, and the still seas into which he had entered by his uncle's death, and by his marriage. Nothing had broken it down, dissolved its continuity dissipated its force. At sea, when a vessel encounters a waterspout, t discharges ordnance, and the vibration of the atmosphere caused by the explosion snaps the co lumn and it goes to pieces. But would the shock caused by the return of Uncle Jeremiah, and th loss of position and wealth that this entailed suffice to break the pillar of self-esteem that constituted Philip Pennycomequick? Hardly; for though touched in many ways, he could hold up his head conscious of his rectitude, he had man aged the mill admirably, kept the accounts ac curately, adapted himself to the new require ments perfectly. He could, when called upon give up his place, but he would march forth with all the honours of war. (To be continued.)
